Supporting the developer! 10/10. :). The best GTA. I have probably spent 100 hours just trying to go sideways on a sketchy mountain pass with a car powered with doritos, do I have any regrets? No.. Shows exactly what well known players have gone through to get to that level. Not just skill but also the toll it took on their personal and family life. Its the sacrifices they have made that the fans don't often get to hear about or know of. Which is why this was brilliant. Got to show the legacy that Counter Strike has, hopefully inspired some players to also follow the same path.

Really enjoyed watching each and every one of them.

Counter strike is given a bad name because of toxic people, counter strike did not make them toxic.. PROS: Interesting story, you have the ability to shoot, short but sweet.

CONS: short but sweet, wish they would have included more enemy variety and or/ bosses.

B+

This is one of those mediocre games.

Has decent graphics and content such as: vehicles tracks and modes. Also customization. Has taken references from other off-roaders like: Motorstorm, DiRT and MX vs. ATV.

Would I recommend it? I'd say get this game in a sale then it'll be worth your money. Otherwise very arcade-y physics and controls.. Amazing game when I had it 5 years ago... shame it has a framerate of -1. A hesitant recommendation. Wait until this goes on sale before you buy it. Why? I finished both maps within an hour, and there is only one new weapon available, a weapon that isn't particularly different from the standard greatsword for Kruber, or the Zweihander for Saltzpyre. And having played 200+ hours on console, I can only say that it feels almost identical in gameplay.

Castle Drachenfels was a massive expansion with two very large maps and an excellent climatic battle map, full of new art and awesome new weapons. The best expansion by a country mile.

Karak Azgaraz is also pretty fantastic. With two large maps and decent climax. The new weapons were only ok though but it's almost worth it just for the fantastic new music and the Rangers dialogue.

Stromdorf is decent. One largish map and a fairly small one-with a twist absolutely worth lauding-set in a... not too bad new setting. The rain looks ok? To be honest the new maps are rather bland. The fields don't stand out nearly as much as the snowy plains of the mountains, and the city itself is a pale imitation of Ubersreik's grungy glory. Also, its worth noting that Reaching Out is by far the biggest drain on your rig in this game, outclassing even the Garden of Morr and the White Rat for fps drop. I play a comfortable 65 fps on most maps, but find myself dropping down to 43-47 pretty regularly in Stromdorf.

The new weapon is a big sword not very different at all from the greatsword, and that is all there is to it. Nothing exciting and honestly disappointing, imo. We've had new weapons like the Volley Crossbow and the Glaive, so another greatsword is not even worth mentioning.

If there was new music, except for one moment in Reaching Out, it wasn't good enough to stand out from the standard soundtrack. I didn't notice.

All in all, its fine. New maps always add a little something to a game, even if they aren't very innovative or different from the rest. Worth buying on sale, but otherwise just play it for free with some friends or a generous pubbie.. Short but amazing. Pretty sure this is the 1st VR experience where things looked real. I mean really real. The graphics were auto set on high.

The metal and woodwork looked real.. Edit Januar 27th 2018: The developer has asked me to update this review as they have fixed some of the issues I've listed. I am not going to alter what I originally wrote as that stands as a review of the product I played at the time.

They seem to be continuing to work on the game so I recommend checking if the issues I have listed have already been fixed before making a decision on buying the game.

The dev said they have implemented key bindings which will go a long way to alleviate the biggest issue I had with the game.

If any more updates are made you might find info from the comment section of this review where the developer has been posting a bit.

I also ran into another issue with the game where if you full screen the game on a 16:10 resolution it breaks the UI, this has not yet been fixed as of this writing according to the developer and it is not "top priority" to fix it. This was a game breaking bug for me as I was unable to revert the change after it was done.

This is a first impressions review after having played the game a few hours.

My experience with the game is a bit mixed. Its a fun little incremental game about watching numbers grow as you explore the galaxy and build up production buildings on the planets you find. You fly around in a ship which you can upgrade as you fight a never ending onslaught of enemies.

While the core game play loop is great this game has a SEVERE case of console port going on.

- * There are no graphics options.
- * You can't change resolution (all you can do is ALT+Enter to enable windowed)
- * You can't use multiple saves
- * The menus are a mess
- * The controls are nonsenseical and can't be rebound.

It's painfully obvious that the entire game has been made to be played with a controller and ZERO thought went into porting it over to keyboard. Playing dual joystick shooters on mouse\keyboard was never great, but it has never been this bad either.

There is no mouse support, swapping weapons can only be done with IJKL, forcing you to move your hands to a random place on the keyboard, boost is set to RIGHT shift; a button I haven't clicked for a game ever before. Swapping between tabs in the menus uses Shift and Control, something I had to ask the forums to find out.

The game also have some issues with turning on and off controllers while the game is on, so if you run into that I recommend restarting the game.

All of these problems should be trivial to fix with a patch, but until that happens I recommend getting this game ONLY if you play with a controller and you don't mind the lack of a proper options menu.

It's a real shame that developers treat the PC platform like this. If you really have no clue how a PC game should be designed, why not consult someone who does before you release the game?. I have become much more introverted since I have gotten older. One of my grandsons is autistic and noise hurts him too, so I related to the main character a lot. Plot and animation I found strange yet charming and innovative. Kept me engaged enough to read it in one sitting. The part where the boys lists the things his mother does for him gave me a lump in my throat. Well, I am a grandmother, what can I say? ;). Nice and very good for terrain drawing and special effects!!!. This game is very fun and challenging! This game is great for anyone who likes any sort of video game. The two hours I played to beat this video game have been the best two hours of my life 11\10 would play again.. Crashes. Unplayable. Horrible UI. I wanted to like this game so badly but ugh.
